What's New in the?

Adobe Flash Compression Test (SWFShrink) shows the percentage of compression loss for every image in a flash movie. It's fully integrated into Adobe Flash CS3 environment. The flash movie (i.e. swf file) will be decompressed and the percentage loss will be shown for every image. You can see the compression loss only for those images that you want, the loss can be specified for every image separately. You can set the compression loss percentage, the target file size and the quality. Features: Compression loss percentage is shown for each image. The output filename is set for each image. You can specify a maximum file size for the compressed image. Quality is set for the compressor and for the final compressed image. Usage: It's just a matter of clicking and using it, nothing else to configure. Download SWFShrink: Please read the Readme.txt file for the download link. Source code: C# source code is available for download. User rating: 5.0 After unzipping the downloaded archive SWFShrink.exe will be run. After closing the program a icon will be shown in the system tray. Right click the icon and select the "Show Information" option, to open the Help file. If you have any questions or suggestions for improvements, please let us know. Q: How to set the value of the argument I have written a function to solve the basic linear equation. I'm trying to modify the function to the following:

def LinearSolver(a,b): """ :param a: array (nx1) :param b: array (nx1) :return: array (nx1) """ M = np.array([[ 1, 0], [ 0, 1]]) P = np.array([[ a[0] - b[0], a[1] - b[1]], [a[0] - b[0], a[1] + b[1]], [a[0] + b[0], a[1] - b[1]], [a[0] + b[0], a[1] + b[1]]]) P = P.T.dot(M) e = np.linalg.det(P) if e > 0: return P elif e
