5. Add the background layer and paint it blue. Be careful to keep the fill color of the new layer slightly lighter than the photo's background color. The lighter your color, the easier it is to blend. Use the Brush tool's Soft Round or Hard Round brushes to quickly paint over the background and soften the edges of the grass. For this tutorial, this might be the best way to add that grass and blend it in with the background. 6. Create a new layer and place it over the grass. You can create layers by drawing new shapes and then placing them over your photo. Then, you can change the order they appear or edit the appearance of individual layers. 7. Reduce the opacity of the layer down to 30%. At this point, you can begin adjusting the placement of the grass. Often, this is a difficult task because the grass is so bright against the dark background. You can use a copy tool, draw freehand around it, or simply place it over the top of your image. 8. Copy the grass layer down to the Background layer. Most of the time, doing this will make it easier to edit the placement of the grass. By placing the grass over the Background layer, you can easily see where it overlaps the image and move it where you want it to be. 9. Paste the grass layer onto the Background layer. Keep the grass just below the outside edge of the photo (or slightly to one side) so that the edges of the grass blend more naturally with the background and the photo's shape. You can resize and move the grass to try different angles, or use the Pencil tool to make line drawings that let you see the frame of the photo clearly as it is blended with the background. Just be careful that you don't draw over parts of the photo. An easy way to do this is to draw lightly, adjust the opacity of the brush, and then erase the rough line. 10. Change the brush to a smaller brush size. This smaller brush size gives a more refined appearance to the grass. By clicking on the layer thumbnail and then pressing the Alt/Option key, you can reveal the layer's opacity, which changes the mixture of the two color layers. If you reduce the opacity to 35% or less, you'll see a lot
